Save the Rhino: One in Six Thousand painted by one of Six Billion

With only about 6,000 individuals left on earth, the rhinoceros is an extremely endangered animal. They have been poached to near extinction for their horns which are made of the same substance that is in human hair and fingernails. Some people in Asia and the Middle East believe that rhino horns should be used for flu medicine or for ceremonial dagger handles. If these people would try aspirin for fever and recycled aluminum for the knife handles, then perhaps humans and rhinos could live in peace.

International wildlife veterinarian, Jennifer Conrad, DVM, uses art to express the joy of animals. This card has purpose. It provides funds for the veterinary needs of animals around the world, and it provides a striking, environmentally friendly, art card for the humans who care.
Everybody wins.

The Paw Project will receive a portion of the proceeds from the sale of this card to finance reconstructive surgery for tigers and lions whose feet have been crippled by the cruel practice of declawing.
